INSURANCE & BENEFITS REPORT – OCTOBER 2025

JOHN ARNOLD

Hello Brothers and Sisters!

Well October is here, and boy has this year flown by. This is my favorite time of the year with football underway and the cool autumn temperatures.

We are now about one month away from Annual Enrollment. I have no prediction of what next year's premiums will be this time. But, if you have been thinking about making changes to your coverage this would be the time to do so. As always, once I get the premiums I will post them on the Unions website at www.uawlocal974.org and will post them in our Facebook group. You can also call me on the week of October 27th at which point I should have those numbers.

In Solidarity, John Arnold
Insurance & Benefits Chairman

BARGAINING CHAIRMAN'S REPORT – OCTOBER 2025

BOBBY KOLLER

Greetings Brother and Sisters,

The current docket has 5 issues and 4 just cause grievances.

This year is flying by. Hard to believe we are 3 months away from Christmas and 2026. I continue to work with Committeemen in all the Business Units to get grievances resolved that they refer to my office. Along with International and the Chairmen of the Business Units, we meet for docketing with Company and argue these grievances each quarter. The last docket meeting was held on July 30, 2025, and we were able to resolve several of those grievances.

I received an arbitration decision on August 4, 2025, for the arbitration I mentioned in the last newsletter. Unfortunately, the arbitrator denied the grievance. The arbitrator determined that the members misconduct warranted discharge, and that the Company had just cause.

We will have Committeemen training on November 3rd through 6th this year in Ottawa, IL.

I hope to see everyone at the Trunk or Treat on October 18th.

Please don't hesitate to call me with any questions or concerns at (309) 694-3151.

In Solidarity, Bobby Koller, Bargaining Chairman

PEOPLE WERE SOLD A LIE

Loren Meyers, Plantwide Safety Chairman

If you've watched the documentary Oceangate on Netflix, then you know who David Lochridge is. David is the whistleblower who had been sacked by the firm behind the sub, Oceangate, after warning about safety issues in 2018. In June 2023 the sub imploded killing all five people on board – including Oceangate's own CEO Stockton Rush. Lochridge had joined Oceangate seven years earlier as the company's Director of Marine Operations. Oceangate was building a new submersible to take paying passengers down to the most famous wreck in the world - the Titanic. Lochridge has worked at sea for more than 25 years, first with the Royal Navy and later as a submersible pilot. He also led submarine rescue operations, responding to distress calls from people trapped underwater. He knows about the risks involved in deep dives. His responsibilities included planning dives and, as chief pilot, he would be the one taking the sub and its passengers 3,800m beneath the waves to see the Titanic. Safety was at the heart of his role. "He told BBC News. "I was responsible for the safety of all Oceangate personnel and all of the passengers that were going to be coming in the sub."

He said he was told by Oceangate's CEO Stockton Rush that the craft would undergo a safety assessment by an independent marine organization, known as Certification. Lochridge was adamant that this third-party oversight was essential - especially because Titan was to be made of experimental materials. But by the summer of 2016 he was starting to have doubts about the project. Oceangate stopped working with APL and decided to bring the design and construction of Titan in-house. Lochridge was worried because He didn't have the same confidence in Oceangate's engineers. He told the BBC he didn't think they had experience of building subs able to withstand the immense pressures found at the depth of the Titanic. He stated, "At that point, I started asking questions and was going to keep asking". As the parts for Titan began to arrive, and the craft started to take shape, Lochridge said he was spotting problem after problem. He learned that Titan was not going to be independently certified for safety. Always outspoken on safety issues he wasn't going to stay silent. "I brought up all the issues that I was seeing... but I was just met with resistance all the way," he said. In January 2018, he outlined his concerns again to Stockton Rush. This time Rush asked him to complete an inspection of the vessel. Titan was at a crucial point of its development. Passengers had already paid deposits for dives to the Titanic planned for later that year. Test dives were about to start in the Bahamas before those expeditions got underway. Lochridge wanted Oceangate to delay these plans. "I formulated a report and I sent it out to all the directors in the company." The following day he was summoned to a meeting with Rush and several other Oceangate employees. To Lochridge's surprise, immediately after this meeting he was fired. But he was so concerned about Titan that he got in touch with the US government's Occupational Safety and Health Administration - OSHA. But Lochridge says after OSHA wrote to Oceangate to tell them it was starting an investigation, everything changed. In March, Oceangate asked Lochridge to drop the OSHA complaint - and demanded he pay $10,000 for legal costs. Lochridge declined. Then in July 2018, Oceangate sued Lochridge and his wife Carole for breach of contract, misappropriation of trade secrets, fraud and theft, amongst other allegations. The following month, Lochridge countersued for unfair dismissal. Lochridge maintains that throughout the process OSHA was slow and failed to protect him from the ongoing retaliation he was receiving from Oceangate. "I provided all the documentation to OSHA, I was on the phone to OSHA every few weeks." he said. "OSHA did nothing."

'They beat us down'

In December 2018, under increasing pressure from Oceangate's lawyers, Lochridge and his wife took the decision to drop the case. This meant the legal proceedings were settled, and as part of this agreement Lochridge withdrew his complaint at OSHA. OSHA stopped its investigation and also notified the US Coast guard that the complaint had been suspended. Lochridge also signed a non-disclosure agreement. "Carole and I did everything we physically could, we just got to the point that we were completely burned... We had nothing left to give to it. They beat us down." Oceangate continued at pace with its plans to reach the Titanic. In 2018 and 2019, the prototype sub made its first test dives in the Bahamas - including one, piloted by Stockton Rush, that reached a depth of 3,939 m. A crack was later found in the sub's carbon fiber hull, and in 2020 that damaged hull was swapped out for a new one, in what became the second version of Titan. In 2021, the company started taking passengers to the Titanic, and over the next two summers made 13 dives to the famous wreck. But in June 2023, the sub went missing with five people on board - including Stockton Rush. After days of anxious waiting, the sub's wreckage was found littered across the ocean floor.

Many of our UAW members, including myself, have experienced the same situations where we try to do the right thing and management doesn't take it seriously or they retaliate against you for being persistent. At a time when it seems like "being right" has become more important than what is right, we all need to stand together. If there is a health or safety problem you are aware of and it affects you or your co-workers, report it to your supervisor and your union representative. Your UAW Safety Representative is there to advocate for you, but we must take the first steps together. Our Safety Complaint Procedure was agreed upon in the recent negotiations-use it. Instead of all the substitute methods for reporting hazards like C/I cards and suggestion boxes, call for your UAW Safety representative.
